

PRESIDENT'S CORNER

Last week, 24 other Gulf Coast members and I had the distinct pleasure of attending the National PDI in Minneapolis. It has been a few years since I was able to attend and I had forgotten how awesome this event can be for training and networking with others in our career field.

This year I was also able to accept several awards on behalf of the chapter. These awards were Five Star Chapter, Meritorious Award for Chapter Competition, Meritorious Award for Chapter Communication, and a Community Service Award. I would like to thank all of our volunteers who make the difference in our chapter giving a special thanks to our chapter Secretary Ms Sharon Pedersen who puts together the 5 Star competition package and ensures it is on time and accurate. I would also like to thank Ms Laura Gamble who publishes our Newsletter each month; Mr Jason Guzzardo and Ms Lynn Becker who head up our Information Technology team and website. Without these three people we would not have been recognized for our chapter communication.

Also let me thank Ms Sheila Hale, Ms Brianna Hoppel, and Ms Maika Andrew who publicize and track our volunteer opportunities and hours so that we are able to make such a difference in our community. * continued next page ****

I would like the entire chapter to realize that we have an outstanding chapter and others look to us as the example. I had two other chapter presidents approach me at the president's reception and ask from some pointers on how their chapter can reach our level of expertise. It is a great honor for me to serve with such great professionals.

Remember the June luncheon on Tuesday June 14, 11:00 at Scully's on the Bayou and then the change of officers and scholarship winner's luncheon on July 19.

Thanks again to all of the true professionals who make up The Gulf Coast Chapter!

Dedra Dedra Hickman, CDFM President, Gulf Coast Chapter

CDFM – Ron Millis

ASMC Gulf Coast Chapter congratulates Dorothy Goring-Briley (96 CPTS) for completing the requirements to become CDFM and Sharon King (46 Rang) for completing the Acquisition module.

ASMC Pledge of Professionalism

As a CDFM, I will:

Be guided in all activities by loyalty to the highest principles always remembering that public office is a public trust.

Refrain from activities which are in conflict with the public interest or are discreditable to the Society, and avoid activities which create the appearance of such conflict.

Exercise diligence, objectivity and integrity in professional activities, ever aware of the responsibility to avoid improprieties.

Refrain from the transmission or usage, for personal gain or advantage, of information obtained in the professional environment.

Carefully earn and continuously protect my reputation for good moral character in comptrollership.

Recognize that professional example will influence associates and efficiency.

Continuously strive to increase my professional knowledge and skills to improve service and value to associates and the Society.

Extend the same consideration to the rights and interests of others that I seek for myself.

Respect the professionalism of fellow-members and work with them to promote the goals and programs of the Society.

For questions on program enrollment, testing, and in-residence course please contact Ron Millis at DSN 872-4329

What's changed for women in federal service

James Tsugawa, Senior Research Analyst; Cynthia Ferentinos, the Senior Research Psychologist, Office of Policy and Evaluation, MSPB and Suzanne Kubota (Government Executive and Federal News Radio)

A lot has changed in the last 20 years, especially for women who work in the federal government. The Merit Systems Protection Board has just updated a 1992 study of women and opportunity.

In 1992, a glass ceiling was found to be limiting the advancement of women in the federal government. James Tsugawa, Senior Research Analyst in the Office of Policy and Evaluation, at MSPB told Federal News Radio, the most recent study finds "a great deal of progress that's been made."

With women making up 11 percent of the senior executives in 1990 and more than 30 percent now, said Tsugawa, "our sense is that issues such as sexbased discrimination and stereotyping, although they haven't gone away, are much less an issue than they were."

Dr. Cynthia Ferentinos, the Senior Research Psychologist in the same office cautioned, "we've certainly seen progress, but unfortunately, sometimes closing the last bit of the gap is the hardest. We're looking now at thing that are relatively entrenched in the government".

Ferentinos credited more opportunities for women to advance, and an increase in opportunities for women in education and experience "which has allowed them to be much more competitive at the higher levels."

Changes over the past 20 years include educating and encouraging mangers, said Ferentinos, "to make sure that they're focusing on those job related characteristics - the education, the experience - and the other qualifications that make people qualified for their jobs and not irrelevant characteristics such as their sex, or their marital status, or family status."

Tsuwaga noted some the differences between the private and public sectors. "One of the things that the federal government offers that I think private sectors don't always is the opportunity for people to work their way up the ranks, and certainly it's important that you do a good job in your current job, work hard, but if you make that transition into a professional occupation or an administrative occupation, something like IT or HR, I think it's important for employees to know that that's a real career change and it takes not only hard work but a change in outlook as well as continuing effort to develop your technical knowledge as well as skills in things like project management, interpersonal relations, and I think it helps if agencies tell employees what they're looking for and give them some guidelines for how to manage the transition successfully."

Even with the progress that has been made, Ferentinos cautioned that federal managers can't stop now and just wait for more progress to occur.
